Random Praise for the Flogmaster's Writing

Brilliantly imaginative story... shades of "Dorian Gray."
T.E.M.

Great setup, but I do feel badly for the one girl who didn't want to participate, and got her butt roasted anyhow.
R.S.R.

I have read hundreds of these stories and this is my favourite. Short, concise, funny.
C.J.H.

Ritual and caning are two of my favourite themes and this story has both in spades! Well-written and totally over-the-top with respect to severity, but completely enjoyable non-the-less. Congratulations.
C.Y.

Absolutely superb, atmospheric beginning, setting the scene with the minimum of detail and yet telling you all you want to know.
D.K.

Interesting premise. Well-described. Great fun.
C.M.

Loved the ending. Funny, but not for Suzie!
O.M.

Selected Excerpts

From A Charming Girl:

“Daddy, you have to spank me,” she said, struggling to get the terrible words out. She handed him the money as though that explained everything.

“Wait, you’re paying me to spank you?” he said with a laugh. Then he frowned. “Where’d you get so much money?”

“I stole it from Mommy,” Cathy admitted, beginning to cry.

From Famous Four:

“Justice must be vigorous and swift,” he said sternly. “For a case as serious as this, it must also be public.”

While he was speaking, several others were bringing some armless wooden chairs up. There were four of them, placing a row, about two feet apart. They were backwards, their fronts facing the back of the auditorium stage. I remember that puzzling me, but my brain was buzzing thoughts and I was numb with terror and couldn’t think properly.

Then Mr. Gruffud waved his cane and we each moved to a chair. Though he hadn’t said a word, we knew what to do. We leaned over the backs and put our hands on the seats, gripping the edges for dear life.

From Helpful Sister:

Frowning, Grace got to her feet. She did so with surprising elegance, considering her heavy center of gravity, for she was a spry little thing. Upright she looked less like a child and more like a teen, though she still seemed dreadfully young until you noticed her heavy breasts and broad hips.

“Can I at least keep my pants on?” she whined.

“For a bit,” said Tess. “We’ll start with the big paddle and you’ll feel that right through jeans.”

Twelve of the Best

A superlative collection of the Flogmaster's best erotic spanking stories

VOLUME EIGHTY ("SCHOOLGIRL")

This collection of the Flogmaster's best writing contains stories dealing primarily with the corporal punishment and discipline of minors (usually female) by adults or peers, though some stories may contain sexual activities.

About the Warning labels

Because spanking stories often involve extreme topics (S&M, sex acts, etc.), the Flogmaster labels his stories to give readers an idea of what might be included. Here's a sample:

Paul Bunyan and the Great Lakes

(★ ★ ★ ★ , M/Ffff—Absurdly Severe, nc ole fashion paddlin')

A strange new twist on the ole yarn about how Paul Bunyan and Babe the Blue Ox created the Great Lakes. (Approximately 1,758 words.)

The stars are the Flogmaster's own ratings of his stories. They indicate writing quality, not necessarily eroticism. Five star stories are my very best.

Stories are marked with mFmf labels to indicate who is spanking whom. Capital letters represent adults and lower case are minors (under 18), and of course, M refers to males and F to females. Under this system, anything to the left of the slash indicate a Spanker and anything to the right a Spankee. Therefore in the above example an adult male is spanking three girls and a woman. If there are a lot of people involved, sometimes this is abbreviated with a number, such as F6/f24, implying that 6 women spank 24 girls. Keep in mind that the label refers to the primary participants—sometimes, especially in longer stories—there may be minor spankings of a different type included.

I try to indicate the overall severity level (Mild, Serious, Intense, Severe, or Edgy), as well as what types of spankings are included (i.e. caning, birching, hairbrush spanking, etc.). Stories may also contain other warnings and explanations. These are usually self-explanatory words like "sex" or "anal" (to indicate types of sexual activity). You may also see references to cons or non-cons (or nc). Those abbreviations refer to consensual and non-consensual spankings. (Punishment spankings, especially those of children, are usually nc.) Some stories are labeled semi-cons, meaning it's partially consensual (e.g. a reluctant wife submitting to her husband's discipline because she knows she deserves punishment).

The second line contains a brief description of the story. I try not to include any "spoilers" that would ruin the plot for you. The description should intrigue if you are interested in the subject matter, and warn you away if you are not. As always, read at your own risk. There's also an approximate word count of the story.

A Charming Girl

(★★★★★, FM/f—Severe, non- and semi-consensual spanking, guilt, loving parents)

In the 1950s, a good girl asks for a spanking. (Approximately 2,315 words.)

Cathy was a charming little girl. She was extremely pretty with glossy black hair that fell in waves around her cute face with its large brown eyes, tiny nose, and sweet smile. Though pre-teen, she already had a feminine, developing body and looked like a miniature figure of a young lady.

She tried to be grown up, too, helping her mother around the house and bringing Daddy his slippers when he came home from work. She was learning to cook and sew and could be relied upon to babysit her little brother.

She was, in almost all aspects, a good girl.

But no girl is perfect, not even Cathy. And there were times when she broke a rule, lost her temper, or otherwise misbehaved. In those circumstances, she was soundly spanked. Usually this was across the lap of her mother, who drew down the little girl's panties and enforced her command with a stout wooden rosewood hairbrush on Cathy's bare bottom. Cathy really hated that thing because it burned her rear so—but she knew it was necessary and would obediently bring it to her mother.

Much more rare were the times when her father had to discipline her. This would happen when Cathy was extra-naughty, her mother was indisposed, or her offense was against her mother, like the when she was five and said nasty things to the woman who'd birthed her. Angry and insulted, Cathy's mother gave the hairbrush to her husband and told him to do his duty—she was too furious and feared she might injure the child.

Now Cathy didn't like it when her mother spanked her, but she really didn't like it when father had to take over. He was much bigger and stronger than her mother and he paddled her little cheeks so much harder and longer. She'd cry buckets and buckets and swear she'd never be able to sit down again.

Fortunately, Father spankings were rare, reserved for unusual circumstances, and Cathy was such a good girl even her mother only had to punish her a few times a year.

But there were occasions when even Cathy was naughty and such an event happened when she was sent to the store to buy some milk and eggs. One of her father's business associates was coming for dinner and her mother was in a frazzle trying to get everything ready. She wanted to bake a cake for dessert but was out of eggs and low on milk.

There was a grocery store just ten blocks down the road and Cathy could ride there on her bicycle. She was proud as she went, feeling good that she was helping out her family, and best of all, she had a crisp $20 bill in her pocket. She'd never even seen so much money, but it was the only bill her mother had. Remember, back in 1957 that could buy a lot of things!

As often happens when a young person faces temptation for the first time, the situation is overwhelming and the right decision isn't made. That's what happened to Cathy, who was given back so much change she hardly knew where to put it all.

She was also very concerned about not breaking the eggs, which she'd put in the front basket of her bicycle. With the extra weight the bike pedaled oddly and she had to concentrate so that she didn't hit a curb or pothole and spill her precious contents.

When she arrived home, proud of accomplishing her errand, her mother was so hard at work preparing the dinner that she forgot to ask her daughter for the change. Neither of them thought of it until much later, when Cathy went to put on her Sunday dress so she'd look nice when the important guest arrived. That's when the girl noticed all the cash in her various pockets.

As she piled it all on her bed it looked like a million dollars and young Cathy had a fantasy of going on a shopping spree and thought of all the wonderful things she could buy: a fancy house for her dolls, sweet treats, and probably enough leftover for a closet full of pretty dresses!

(Clearly Cathy was too young to know exactly how far $20 went, even in 1957 when things were much cheaper.)

An evil thought struck her that with so much money, would her mother even notice if a little bit of it was missing? She set aside the coins first, and normally she'd have been delighted to have a quarter, but compared to all the bills they seemed insignificant. She greedily wanted real money, and wondered if she could take a dollar or two.

To justify this, her brain came up with the idea that she deserved something for her errand. It had been a long bike ride and she'd had to be oh so careful to not break even a single egg—surely that deserved a treat!

With this logic, she hid two of the dollar bills under her music box. Then she piled all the other cash—several fives, lots of ones, and all the coins—and put it on her mother's dresser in her room.

This deposit was placed right near the dreaded rosewood hairbrush that occasionally left red marks on Cathy's bare bottom and for a moment she almost changed her mind. But then she told herself her mother wouldn't even count the money. It looked like a small fortune and Cathy was certain she'd gotten away with her deception.

Cathy was absolutely correct. The last minute dinner party, though hastily concocted, was a success, with the business client pleased. Cathy's parents were so happy neither thought much about the expenses. Mother found the money and put it in her purse, never doing the math of exactly how much a quart of milk and a dozen eggs cost.

That night Cathy slept fitfully, as nervous as a cat in a junkyard that at any minute her bedroom door would burst open with her mother—or her father—demanding to know what she'd done with the money. No such thing happened, of course, and eventually Cathy fell asleep, though her dreams were dark and troubled.

The next morning her parents were chipper at breakfast and though Cathy was leery, no one said anything about any missing money. Days went by and the matter was undoubtedly forgotten. Cathy had gotten away with it!

Relieved, she turned her attention as to what she could purchase with her newfound fortune. The possibilities were endless, except when she began investigating the actual costs of the items she imagined, the prices were much higher than she'd thought. She didn't have enough after all. Two dollars was a fortune when she only spent it on nickel candy or fabric scraps to use for making dresses for her dolls—but it didn't go far when she wanted to buy outfits for herself.

Depressed, Cathy didn't spend the money. It haunted her, "burning a hole in her pocket," as they say, though it was still under her music box when she checked twice a day.

The stress of wanting to spend the ill-gotten gain gradually got to her. She didn't sleep well and twice got in trouble for not waking up in the morning and being late for breakfast. She also wasn't as helpful around the house, forgot her chores and homework, and grew so irritable that she even yelled at her little brother.

That earned the seat of her panties a few smacks from her mother's palm. They stung and reminded her of the cost of sin and Cathy was instantly ashamed of her outburst. She apologized to her mother and her brother, though he was too young to really understand—he'd already forgotten the incident.

The little half-spanking got Cathy thinking, however, and the guilt of her crime began to overwhelm her. Everywhere she went she noticed things that reminded her of the money. Her teacher at school used a math problem involving two dollars and some apples that cost ten cents. Her father mentioned something about higher taxes when he read the paper that night, and taxes always made him grouchy. As Cathy wondered if her two dollars would help, she saw an advertisement on the back page of the paper for a new doll that cost $1.99.

This was almost the universe mocking her. Cathy wanted to die. She finally couldn't take it any more. When her mother went upstairs to take a bath, the little girl ran upstairs to her parent's room and snatched the awful hairbrush off the dresser. Then she went to her room and carefully lifted the wooden music box and saw the folded one-dollar bills were still there. She took them and the brush downstairs to her father.
